Your Submitted Press Release

Miami, Florida, United States, 30th Mar 2026 — FixMold, a South Florida-based Mold Removal Company, has announced the launch of Dr. Detox Mold, a physician-supervised program designed to support individuals who have experienced mold exposure. The program pairs licensed medical oversight with structured recovery protocols, extending FixMold's work in mold inspection and mold remediation into the area of post-exposure health support.

The announcement marks an expansion of services offered under the FixMold brand, which has provided mold testing, mold removal, and indoor air quality services across Miami-Dade, Broward, and Palm Beach counties for years.

About the Dr. Detox Mold Program

Dr. Detox Mold was developed in response to feedback from clients who reported persistent discomfort following completed mold remediation services. While environmental remediation addresses contamination within a property, the new program focuses on individualized medical evaluation for those seeking follow-up care after exposure.

The program follows a structured process that includes:

- Initial evaluation of exposure history and reported symptoms
- A stabilization phase prior to any treatment
- Physician-monitored recovery tailored to individual presentation

Treatment options available through the program may include diagnostic testing, IV therapy, and protocol-based interventions involving peptides, enzymes, and related compounds, all administered or supervised by licensed professionals. Each case is evaluated individually, and the program does not offer uniform treatment.

Medical Team

Dr. Detox Mold is operated with direct involvement of licensed healthcare professionals:

- Dr. David Coradin, M.D., a board-certified physician responsible for clinical oversight and protocol review
- Michael Murphy, BSN, a vascular access specialist supporting IV therapy administration

“Mold exposure affects people differently. Our approach begins with a careful evaluation of each patient’s history and current condition. The goal is to offer structured, medically supervised care that progresses at an appropriate pace for the individual.”

— Dr. David Coradin, M.D., Clinical Lead, Dr. Detox Mold

Context: Mold Exposure and Indoor Air Quality

Indoor mold growth is a recognized environmental concern, particularly in South Florida's humid climate. Substances associated with mold-affected environments may include mycotoxins, airborne particulates, fiberglass from deteriorating duct systems, and residues linked to water damage. Mold assessment and professional remediation are the primary tools for addressing contamination at the property level.

Dr. Detox Mold does not replace property remediation. FixMold continues to provide mold inspection, mold testing, mold removal, and air quality restoration services for residential, commercial, and marine properties. The new program is positioned as a separate, optional resource for individuals seeking medical guidance after exposure.

Statement from Abraham Katz

“Over the years, we’ve helped thousands of families and businesses address mold problems in their properties. But we kept hearing from clients who wanted to know what to do next — for themselves, not just their homes. Dr. Detox Mold is our answer to that question. It brings licensed medical professionals into the conversation and gives people a clear, structured option to explore.”

— Abraham Katz, FixMold
