HH Red Stone, a national student housing and multifamily property management platform, has been ranked among the top 10 student housing management companies in J Turner Research's 2025 ORA (Online Reputation Assessment) Power Rankings. The company placed 10th nationally, earning recognition for its exceptional online reputation and resident-focused operations.

The ORA Power Rankings analyze online reviews, ratings, and resident feedback across multiple platforms to evaluate property management companies' performance and reputation. HH Red Stone's top 10 placement positions the company alongside industry leaders including Cardinal Group, Greystar, and Peak Campus, demonstrating the effectiveness of its resident-first approach despite managing a significantly smaller portfolio than many competitors.

"This recognition validates what we've always believed: when you treat residents as your CEO and maintain operations with genuine discipline and consistency, the results speak for themselves," said Teddy Abdelmalek, Senior Vice President of Business Development at HH Red Stone. "We're honored to be ranked among much larger operators while staying true to our commitment to deliver institutional-grade service at a boutique scale."

In addition to ranking the Top 25 Student Housing Managers based on ORA scores, J Turner Research also recognized managers through the 2025 Einstein Best of Awards across the five areas of on-site operations most valued by residents: Customer Service, Communication, Cleanliness, Maintenance, and Security. Powered by J Turner Research's Einstein text categorization tool and proprietary artificial intelligence, Thought Analysis, the Einstein Best of Awards go beyond star ratings to identify the companies setting the standard for operational excellence in student housing.

Based on more than 12 million reviews analyzed, HH Red Stone stood out against a highly competitive national field. The company outperformed several larger operators, ranking #1 in Communication, #3 in Cleanliness, #3 in Maintenance, #8 in Customer Service and #19 in Security. The results reinforce the company's strong resident-first operating approach and highlight the consistency of execution across the operational areas that matter most to students.

The ranking becomes particularly significant given HH Red Stone's recent expansion into third-party property management. After a decade of exclusively managing HH Group's owned portfolio, the company launched its third-party management vertical in 2024 to serve other owners with the same institutional-grade approach it applies to its own assets.

"This recognition reflects our commitment to being strong stewards of the assets we represent, because reputation is earned every day through consistent execution and an unwavering commitment to our residents," said Teddy Abdelmalek, SVP of Business Development for HH Red Stone.

"In student housing, online reputation is not just about perception. It is a direct reflection of how residents actually experience a community, from communication and service to responsiveness and follow-through. To be recognized at both the company and property level speaks to the dedication of our teams and the standards they bring to their work every single day."

The 2025 ORA Student Housing Power Rankings evaluated management companies based on comprehensive analysis of online reviews and ratings. The assessment provides investors, university partners, and property owners with objective data on management company performance and reputation.

According to J Turner Research, the rankings help stakeholders make informed decisions about property management partnerships by providing transparent, data-driven insights into how companies actually perform from the resident perspective.

HH Red Stone's top 10 ranking arrives as the company expands its national footprint, having recently closed on a property near Yale University. The company currently manages approximately 10,000 beds across multiple asset classes including student housing, multifamily, affordable, and mixed-use properties nationwide.

"This recognition reinforces our belief that doing the fundamentals consistently every single day, treating residents with genuine respect, and maintaining accountability to ownership creates sustainable competitive advantage," Abdelmalek concluded. "We're grateful to our residents for this feedback and to our team members who deliver exceptional service daily."
