Killer Whale Ventures has launched the Killer Whale Intelligence Platform (KWIP) — an AI-powered, non-custodial system built for long-term crypto holders who want to do more than just “HODL and hope.”

KWIP automates professional, rules-based trading strategies so investors can stay consistent without spending hours watching charts. The platform combines expert insights and AI monitoring to react to market movements 24/7, while users retain full control of their assets within their own exchange accounts.

“We built KWIP for people who already believe in crypto but don’t have time to manage it like a trader,” said Dylan Shively, founder of Killer Whale Ventures. “You keep your crypto; our automation helps you stay disciplined and make informed moves.”

The platform’s approach blends AI-powered precision with human expertise, providing clear, data-driven guidance rather than emotional guesswork. Users receive strategy signals and portfolio insights tailored for a variety of market conditions — all with a simple interface requiring no coding, no day trading, and no jargon.

With non-custodial integration, KWIP ensures funds never leave a user’s exchange, addressing one of the biggest trust issues in crypto. Whether someone holds $500 or $500,000, KWIP enables them to grow their portfolios through automation instead of manual reaction.

Testimonials from early users highlight the transformation:

“I don’t have to stare at charts anymore. KWIP watches the market so I can live my life.”

“It’s like having a personal assistant for my crypto — structured and always active.”

KWIP is now available to the public, offering a free introductory demo for new members. Interested users can explore strategies, see real results, and activate 25% off their first month when using the link below.
