Your Submitted Press Release

North Vancouver, BC, Canada, 2nd May 2026 - PlayStopVideos.com and OnlineFreeVideoEditing.com aim to make video editing accessible to anyone with an internet connection, removing barriers for creators who need simple, fast, and free tools to produce digital content.

International, 2026: Paul George Savluc and his technology team are announcing the development and public rollout of a 100% free online video editing application designed for creators, students, entrepreneurs, educators, small businesses, influencers, nonprofit organizations, and everyday users around the world.

The platform will be available through www.playstopvideos.com and www.onlinefreevideoediting.com, with the goal of giving anyone the ability to edit videos directly online without expensive software, complicated setup, or unnecessary barriers.

At a time when video has become one of the most important forms of communication, many people still lack access to professional editing tools. Expensive subscriptions, complex interfaces, heavy downloads, and limited device performance can stop creators before they even begin. Paul George Savluc and the team are building this platform to solve that problem by making video editing simple, accessible, and free.

“Video editing should not be locked behind expensive tools,” said Paul George Savluc. “Students, small businesses, creators, teachers, and people around the world should be able to make clean, professional video content without needing a studio, a paid subscription, or a high-end computer. We are putting this out so anyone can start creating.”

The application is being developed as a browser-based video editing platform that focuses on usability, speed, and accessibility. The goal is to help users upload clips, arrange footage, cut scenes, add text, prepare social media content, and export videos through a clean online workflow.

The platform is especially important for:

- Students creating school projects, presentations, and portfolio videos.
- Small businesses needing affordable marketing content.
- Content creators editing short-form videos for platforms like YouTube, TikTok, Instagram, and LinkedIn.
- Educators preparing lessons, tutorials, and instructional media.
- Nonprofits and community groups producing awareness campaigns.
- Entrepreneurs creating pitch videos, product explainers, and promotional content.
- Everyday users who need a simple way to edit personal or public videos.

Unlike many video editing tools that require paid plans, downloads, or restrictive software environments, PlayStopVideos.com and OnlineFreeVideoEditing.com are being positioned as open-access creative tools for the public. The mission is to help people create, communicate, and publish without being limited by cost.

Paul George Savluc and his team see free creative infrastructure as part of a much larger movement. As online education, business development, media creation, and remote work continue to expand, video editing is no longer just a professional skill. It is becoming a basic digital communication skill. Making it free and easy to access gives more people the ability to participate in the modern digital economy.

“People are building businesses, learning online, making documentaries, creating social media campaigns, teaching classes, and sharing stories through video,” Savluc added. “We want to give them a place where they can start immediately. The future of media should be more accessible, not more expensive.”

The launch of the free online video editing application also reflects the broader work of Paul George Savluc and his team, who continue to build technology platforms across artificial intelligence, media, software development, education, robotics, digital tools, and community-accessible engineering systems. Their work focuses on building practical platforms that help people create, learn, publish, and develop real-world skills.

The first public version of the platform is expected to focus on core editing capabilities, with future improvements planned around templates, creator tools, browser-based workflows, export options, social media formatting, and educational resources for new editors.

The team is inviting creators, students, educators, business owners, and early users to visit:
