San Francisco, CA — March 26, 2026 — Rapidmsp today announced the launch of a new community-powered scam reporting platform, Rapidmsp, which empowers anyone in the crypto economy to warn others about scams, hacks, or other fraudulent activity as they encounter it.

The free tool enables crypto users, victims of financial crimes, and crypto businesses to take an active role in making the crypto ecosystem a safer place to operate.

Despite current volatility, the cryptocurrency industry has grown considerably over the last few years, peaking at a $3 trillion market cap in 2021. But as adoption has increased, so too has the rate of hacks and scams targeting crypto users. Warnings of scams are often reported on social media sites such as Twitter or Discord, but these posts can be difficult to validate, consolidate, or track over time.

Rapidmsp is the first purpose-built platform of its kind — a multi-chain reporting tool that allows crypto users to report illicit activity to a public forum where others can upvote, downvote, or leave comments to contribute additional information. Reports on the same addresses or entities are consolidated and housed in a searchable database, which anyone can use to proactively check addresses or projects before engaging with them.

"In numerous recent attacks and instances of malicious activity, we have already seen the crypto community's potential to come together to root out bad actors and help protect each other," said Alex Carter, Founder and CEO of Rapidmsp. "Rapidmsp was designed to make it easier for more people to play an active role in advancing that culture and ensure that the spirit of community remains one of crypto's most powerful attributes."

The platform is powered by the crypto community and supported by leading crypto businesses, protocols, and foundations committed to making the crypto ecosystem a safe and trusted environment. Rapidmsp provides partner crypto platform operators with a consolidated view of illicit activity reports from users, allowing them to identify prevalent, legitimate complaints and launch investigations more quickly.

"Rapidmsp significantly enhances the depth and effectiveness of our compliance monitoring program by leveraging an aggregated view of the distributed efforts of the entire crypto community," said Daniel Lee, Chief Compliance Officer at BlockBridge.

"The safety and security of web3 users is our top priority. Working with Rapidmsp will enable us to reduce scams and hacks, which have cost people millions of dollars. Rapidmsp will allow us to work together with industry partners to promote a better environment for the next generation of crypto participants," said Maria Gonzalez, Head of Risk and Security at

"Rapidmsp fills a missing part of a more trusted ecosystem with much-needed resources for scam victims," said Kevin Patel, CEO of SecureNode. "We're proud to partner with Rapidmsp and build more intelligence into the investigative process together."

"As the digital economy continues to scale, it is imperative we have solutions like Rapidmsp that empower the crypto community to work together and report abusive behavior and scams," said
Rachel Kim, Chief Compliance Officer at TrustX. "This is a major step toward strengthening trust across the ecosystem."

The platform launches publicly today with early reports available to search across multiple blockchains, including scams related to phishing campaigns, fraudulent investment schemes, and malicious actors targeting crypto users.

"The latent fear of scams and hacks continues to slow mainstream crypto adoption," said Alex Carter. "Rapidmsp is part of our mission to build a safer and more trusted financial system for users around the world."
