Your Submitted Press Release

RetailHub (retailhub.co), an independent brand directory and product review publication, has launched a redesigned version of its website, introducing a cleaner user experience, improved navigation, and a new checkout function for brands looking to purchase editorial articles directly through the platform.

The redesign consolidates RetailHub's core offerings into a more intuitive experience for both consumers and brand partners. Shoppers can now more easily browse the brand directory, explore product reviews, and access best-of editorial guides across categories. The updated structure reduces friction between discovery and decision, making it faster for users to find the products and brands most relevant to them.

For brands and businesses, the most significant addition is a new self-serve article checkout function. Companies interested in editorial coverage can now browse available content options and complete a purchase directly through the site, without requiring a back-and-forth sales process.

The RetailHub editorial team remains independent, producing brand pages, product roundups, and category guides designed to help consumers make informed buying decisions. The redesign brings that content to the surface more effectively, improving how readers navigate across the directory, review sections, showcase, and blog.

"This update is about making RetailHub more useful on both sides of the platform," the RetailHub team said. "Consumers should be able to find what they are looking for without digging, and brands should have a clear, simple path to getting in front of our audience. The new checkout function is a big step toward that."

Brands and consumers can explore the updated platform at retailhub.co.
